TERMITES ARE A MAJOR PROBLEM IN THAILAND!

There is an Answer!

Old Methods of trying to control Termites

Currently being rid of termites is a timely and expensive problem. The termite “experts” of the world battle the termite problem throughout the world with a number of methods such as:

- Expensive processes whilst building your new homes
- Recommendations to use expensive woods such as teak which people are now realising need to be conserved
- Baits and poisons which have been proven to be harmful to the environment and can have harmful side effects to humans and animals. They also require MONTHLY upkeep and maintenance.

All of the current methods of termite Control are costly and simply don't work. Reinfestation is nearly guaranteed and you constantly have the threat of termites returning. With the TTM System you simply have it installed and from that day forward the termites will leave not wanting to return again. Your TTM system has

The Answer The “TTM” System

Termites in Thailand

Termites are rampant through tropical and sub tropical regions. Thailand is located within the tropical climatic zone with various types of forest ecosystems that are suitable for termite growth and development. Termite nests can easily be found everywhere in the forests, farmlands, rural shelters homes and even in city buildings. From studies, there have been 92 species of termites recorded in Thailand

Formosan subterranean termites (predominate throughout Thailand) have also been known to attack (but not eat) non-cellulose material such as thin sheets of soft metal (lead or copper), asphalt, plaster, mortar, creosote, rubber, and plastic in search of food and moisture. However, their highly publicized ability to chew through concrete is a fallacy. Instead of chewing through the concrete, Formosan subterranean termites are uncanny in finding small cracks in concrete that they use as foraging routes. Basically they eat away and destroy your home from the base to the roof.

There are even villages called Bahn Pluark (Termite Mound) in this country which must say something

How the Termite Technology Management "TTM" System Works

The Termite Technology Management (“TTM”) system is a preventative measure for termite management using a computer microchip to induce sweeping sound frequencies (SSF) through activators (sound amplifiers). Depending on the size of your home, a number of activators are installed around your home.

By utilizing an electro-magnetic field (EMF) as a vehicle, we are able to successfully transfer the sweeping sound frequencies emitted from the activators into a target area.

Probably, one of the most important and significant means of communicating for termites is based on vibration signals. Because of this, termite behaviour is influenced through sound signals.

Quite simply the sound frequencies emitted from the activators make it unbearable for the termites to live close to the target area. They have to leave. Even if a winged termite comes to your home it will not be able to live within the sound spectrum and will leave the premises.

If your home is already infested with termites. The “ttm” system will drive the termites away over a short period of time and there will be no reinfestation.

If you want peace of mind for a safe, environmentally friendly low cost and no maintenance way to protect your home... The “TTM” system is for you!

- The TTM system takes just a few hours to install
- It is very cost effective and you have no ongoing maintenance fees.
- Simply have it installed and have piece of mind that you no longer have to worry about termites
